To Whom It May Concern:

I strongly recommend Cameron Mathis for a position on any software development team. As an intern in the AngelTrax Programming Department during the summer of 2019, Cameron worked well independently and with other team members, including myself.

Initially I asked Cameron to write unit tests for several of our existing applications. He was able to get full test coverage in some areas of our code base and, because of his thoroughness, uncovered two bugs in our production systems. Although Cameron had no previous experience with any node.js based applications, he utilized existing test cases to accomplish the task.

Cameron was also able to collaborate with another developer in creating a new JavaFX based application. With this task he utilized his existing Java knowledge and focused on functionality and overall architecture to create a tool that will be valuable to other departments at AngelTrax. Cameron had no previous experience with GUI based applications but was able to adapt quickly and produce results.

I would be happy to have Cameron back, and I recommend him for a position in your organization.

Sincerely,

Ryan Morris
